

Responding with Care to Those in Need

A resource to help Jewish leaders and advocates identify community members in need and guide them toward help.

Make a bigger difference.

How To Help

After your initial conversation, the best place to refer an individual or family in need is the CJP Warmline, either by calling 1-800-CJP-9500 or via cjpwarmline.org. It serves as the front door to all the services the Jewish community provides to those in financial distress.

THE WARMLINE PROCESS

- 1 The person calling speaks with a sensitive, caring professional who assesses the person's needs.
- 2 Callers are connected with case managers, programs, and services at a number of organizations, including:
 - Jewish Family and Children's Service (JF&CS)
 - Jewish Family Services (JFS)
 - Jewish Vocational Service (JVS)
 - Jewish Community Housing for the Elderly (JCHE)
 - Yad Chessed
 - Jewish Big Brothers Big Sisters (JBBBS)
- 3 CJP's warmline helps callers access a range of services, including:
 - Emergency cash and food assistance for such necessities as food, rent, medications, utilities and car repairs
 - Financial counseling
 - Case management services
 - Career counseling and job search coaching
 - Public benefits navigation

If you or someone you know needs help, CJP's warmline will connect you with compassionate resources and support. 1-800-257-9500 | cjpwarmline.org
